

OVERVIEW FOR DONATIONS TO CHILDREN'S SURGICAL CENTRE OR CAMBODIAN ACID SURVIVOR'S CHARITY

Children's Surgical Centre, and its partner, the Cambodian Acid Survivors Charity (CASC) are each governed by an overlapping board of directors. However, each board of directors governs independently. Neither of these entities is subordinate to each other, nor to any other organization. There are shared interests among the two organizations, including: providing charitable medical care to people with disabilities in underdeveloped countries; training to build local capabilities; primary focus on the needs of children and on Cambodia, but primary focus does not preclude serving the people in need other than children or assisting underdeveloped countries other than Cambodia. The organizations are independent of any government and religious organizations. The two organizations do work selectively and synergistically with government organizations and religious organizations of various faiths when there are opportunities to leverage effectiveness of the resources of each organization.

Each of the boards of directors controls the use of funds donated to each of the organizations. The organizations may solicit funds to grant to other organizations (examples are Children's Surgical Centre raising funds for Cambodian Acid Survivors Charity, Sunrise Children's Village, CamKids, Stop Exploitation Now, and possibly others in the future). The organizations may make grants to other organizations without having raised funds specifically for the other organizations (examples are a Rotary International project in El Salvador and Kossamak Hospital in Cambodia). In all cases the boards of directors perform due diligence, ensuring that grants are used for charitable purposes, accounted for, transparent for inspection, and that donations designated for a restricted use (examples: Children's Surgical Centre; Sunrise Children's Village; CamKids) are granted specifically to those beneficiaries.

Unrestricted donations are the greatest need of Children's Surgical Centre and Cambodian Acid Survivors Charity. That is, in addition to specific restricted use projects, funds are most needed for day to day functioning. Please see our Annual Reports or independent audits for more detailed information.
